

JULEO AND ROMIET

a very short skit

by Lois and Kelly Corcoran

<http://offthewallplays.com>

JULEO AND ROMIET

CAST: Narrator
Juleo
Romiet
Friar Lowest

PROPS: Small bottle, fake retractable knife, Shakespeare book, chair

NARRATOR: The two chief families of Blurona were the Capsules and the Moneycues. For many generations they feuded, so it was pretty dumb of Juleo to sneak into a Capsule dance. (shake head and roll eyes) Suddenly he saw the fair Romiet, as she was called...

ROMIET: Good pilgrim, saints have hands that pilgrims hands do touch.

JULEO: What's thy point?

ROMIET: I have no point. Let's just cut to the next scene.

(Next scene shows Romiet, Juleo and Friar Lowest.)

FRIAR: ...And do you, Juleo, take Romiet to be thy top-secretly wedded wife?

JULEO: Sure, what the hecketh.

FRIAR: Then I now pronounce thou husband and wife. (Pause to play "Wedding Song")

NARRATOR: It so happened that the Count arrived around that time, and Romiet's parents insisted she marry him. If thou was paying attention, thou knowest that she already married Juleo. So she sought Friar Lowest's advice.

FRIAR: (paces back and forth, then stops and snaps his fingers) I've got it! Thou shalt pretend to die. Then Juleo can take thou away and thou shalt live happily ever after!

ROMIET: Sounds complicated. Are you sure it'll work?

FRIAR: Thou betcha.